The British Single Shots, Volume 4..... #Book-BSSR-V4 by Wal Winter

Westley Richards was the leader in British breech-loading single shot development. Their early designs predated both the paper cartridge and coil case forms of the 1850-1860 period. Volume 4 describes in great detail Westley Richard's designs during the early breech-loading period. Much attention is given to the text and hundreds of photos and drawings of rifles, sights, reloading tools, and cartridges for all models. 265 pages, black and white photographs and illustrations.

The British Single Shots, Volume 5..... #Book-BSSR-V5 by Wal Winter

The fifth volume of the series covers the activities of Henry John Holland, of Holland and Holland and how from humble beginnings, developed a firm that is today, second to none. He started in 1835 and as his fame grew he turned his attention to building guns for the top end of the London market. Holland had little interest in target rifles, devoting his efforts to building the highest quality sporting guns and rifles. Hardcover 202 pages, black and white photographs and illustrations, some color photos.

The British Single Shots, Volume 6..... #Book-BSSR-V6 by Wal Winter

Volume 6, covers the Webley, Kynoch and Eley companies and it's history. Details of rifles produced: the Scott-Field, Webley-Wyley, model of 1897 and the famous Model of 1902. Webley was, during the late 1800s and early 1900s the largest British manufacturer of sporting arms. The remaining sections of this volume will cover a little known rifle, the Ingram-Coster of 1897 of which only one is known. The history of Eley and Kynoch as well as their activities and developments from black powder days through Cordite and it's problems and the development of Nitro for black loads, compromise the balance of the book. Also included is a large section devoted to additional information and corrections of material covered in previous books in this series. Hard cover, 8-1/2 X 11" format, 311 pages.
