An early 19th century Shot tower,
at Shot Tower Historical Park, Wythe County, Virginia.

Used during the first half of the 19th century, shot towers, like this one in Virginia, sprang up throughout the South. Molten lead was dripped from the top of the tower, creating tiny round balls of bird shot, as it fell 150 feet to a water filled kettle below.

Shot towers declined after the Civil War. They are now a forgotten part of our American heritage.
