Pre-inlet stocks for French Type 'C' fusils:

The early French Type 'C' trade gun was decorated with elegant finials and open work. Our Type 'C' stock is fully shaped, pre-inlet for our lock, lock bolts, 42" barrel, 3/8" ramrod hole drilled full depth, underlugs, trigger, triggerplate, triggerguard, ramrod pipes, and buttplate. You must hand cut any square corners, and scrape away any candle soot or inlet black, where inletting is too tight, until it fits.

Our shaped and pre-inlet stock will allow even the novice to build a fine replica of an early French trade gun. We offer our Type 'C' stock in black walnut or plain maple. Original French fusils were stocked in a variety of woods. American black walnut has a more open grain pores than original French walnut, and requires more finish to seal or fill the pores. We recommend Laurel Mountain Forge Sealer, to fill the pores, after you stain the stock fairly dark, before applying our Permalyne finish. Maple has closed pores, a fine choice for a Type 'C' fusil stock when finished as walnut.

Beware of the temptation to use figured wood on a French trade fusil. Apparently original antique French guns were never stocked in figured wood. Military gun makers selected straight clear grain, to make the strongest stocks. Highly figured wood is becoming widely recognized as an incorrect choice for trade guns and military guns, today.
