The early J. & S. Hawken flint rifle is an excellent second project, for the gun maker.

Build an early J & S Hawken fullstock rifle, using our pre-inlet stock which can accept 1” straight octagon barrels up to 42”. Our L&R flint hooked breech adds one inch to the barrel length. Select sturdy plain maple, fancy maple, or black walnut. Original Hawken rifles were often stocked in strong straight grain maple or walnut. Select our flint lock, with a reinforced double throated cock, or with a graceful gooseneck cock. Both locks were used during the 1820 to 1840 late flint era.

Build a percussion conversion fullstock rifle, using our L&R cap lock. Our percussion lock fits this stock, and the lock plate is cut our 1/2” drum and nipple. The later snail bolster is not used on this stock.

Most original Hawken rifles were trimmed in iron, a few are known with brass trim. Nickel silver inlays and accents were sometimes used. Early J&S Hawken rifles feature a nearly straight front trigger. We also offer a curved front trigger, which gives more room for your trigger finger. Iron patchboxes were found on a few early fullstock and halfstock Hawken rifles.

We consider Hawken Rifle, the Mountain Man’s Choice to be an essential reference. One of the best percussion fullstock Hawken rifles is shown in Accoutrements, Volume 2. Several large views show this fine antique rifle in great detail. Same day shipment of these books, and other titles of interest to gunmakers.
